Powder Coated Hot-Dip Galvanized Steel - Full Disclaimer

Hot-Dip Galvanizing is performed for us by an experienced qualified firm to which we ship our products for galvanizing. Hot-Dip Galvanizing includes an aggressive pre-treatment and immersion in a tank of charged liquid zinc at about 860 deg. F (460 deg. C). The resulting surface is resistant to rust but has some unevenness resulting from the bonding of the zinc to the steel surface.

As a result, the powder-coat surface finish over that galvanized surface may exhibit bumps, unevenness, and not be as smooth as our standard finish; this uneven finish is normal and unavoidable for Hot Dip Galvanizing. In addition, the Zinc coating exhibits a phenomenon known as "Outgassing" when an organic coating is applied on top of it. This outgassing results in localized bumps between the powder-coat layer and the zinc.

The images below visually illustrate some of these expected inconsistencies and imperfections at varying distances from the product's surface.

Finally, any organic coating (including powder-coating) may require periodic maintenance for chipping due to expansion and contraction over the zinc substrate. This can be random and may not occur, but it is sometimes a factor.

Hot Dip Galvanizing is a superb rust-inhibiting process used worldwide, but it can create interference for any paint or powder-coating applied on top of it as a finish-coat. We take steps to minimize these effects but they cannot be completely prevented.
